

Dear Mr Hoban,

Thank you for at last answering my email.

Your attitude comes as no surprise after all this time of ineffective processing of my representations; at least it is now abundantly clear that your loyalties do not lie with your constituents.

To say I am disappointed would be a gross understatement, as you have successfully put the final nail in the Tory coffin when it comes to any votes from Code A

It looks distinctly as though you have lost sight of right and wrong, perhaps blinded by ambition, and your response does much to explain why this case has become so protracted. It is not going to disappear, Mr Hoban, you can rest assured on that. As with the other bodies involved, you need to remember that it is juries that dispense justice, not MPs, judges, lawyers or the police, although we, the public, might look to them for assistance in getting it.

This is a most serious case of blatant euthanasia on your very doorstep, Mr Hoban, where the evidence could not be more compelling, and yet, as my representative in Parliament, you are prepared to sit on the fence and do nothing. Not a pretty sight, and not one that will be easily forgotten.

I cannot imagine in a million years what good you think it would do by writing to the NHS Trust. All that was done years ago to no avail, even whistle-blowing nurses failed in their quest to have this matter investigated properly, and the Trust has completed at least one periodic reshuffle since all this happened.

I'm afraid the few remaining vestiges of confidence I ever had in the motives of Tory politicians have fast disappeared.

Thank you for contacting me about the problems at Gosport Hospital.

While I sympathise with your concerns and am aware of the worrying developments at the hospital, I am unable to commit the Conservative Party to a public enquiry in this instance. The General Medical Council panel have to be strictly neutral in these instances and I do not think the evidence exists to hold a very expensive public enquiry at a time of financial difficulties.

Rather than sign the Early Day Motion, I would be pleased to raise your concerns with Ursula Ward, Chief Executive of Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust, so that she is aware of the strength of feeling on this issue. I shall, of course, forward you any replies that I may receive.

Once again, thank you for taking the time to contact me.

Yours sincerely
