Can you also raise an action to

TI, person at GWMH, QA who is able to produce hospital policy for the period of 1999 in relation to the prescription of drugs via a syringe driver. It is believed that generally, the doses of drugs to be given in a syringe driver should be prescribed as a fixed dose rather than as a range of doses. Any alterations in the dose are generally prescribed by a doctor, following a reassessment of the patient, number of additional as required doses used of analgesics/sedatives etc. A range is sometimes written in settings where doctors as less readily available on-site to change a prescription. If this is accepted practice within an organisation, it should ideally be covered by a policy. (Possibly Dr Reid ) A1391
