 Subject: Dr Barton (re. Arthur Denis Brian Cunningham)

Dear Madam,

I am currently overseas and grateful to the GMC for keeping me informed by email about Dr Barton.

As a professional myself, I find it totally incomprehensible that the General Medical Council could possibly allow one of its members who is guilty of Serious Professional Misconduct to remain on its professional register. What sort of example does that give to the profession?

The allegations of nepotism regarding her brother being a member of the GMC, to be found on the internet, would appear to have foundation, so what is going on?

My reading of the panel's determination indicates that Barton has escaped being struck-off due mainly to the numerous letters of support that have been gathered in recent weeks. How can that have any possible bearing on her psychopathic behaviour in the 1990s, and begs the question as to why the GMC has waited this long before carrying out the investigation now completed. Also, was the hearing now completed interrupted for three months in order to allow time for the gathering of these letters? To have 'run out of time' sounds less than convincing by any measure.

I have thought for a long time that the events surrounding Barton have been covered up for political reasons as evidenced, among other things, by the Chief Medical Officer's self-confessed suppression of the Baker Report, and this turn of events does nothing to alleviate that.

As a representative of one of the families directly affected by all this, I am totally disgusted and dissatisfied by the failure to strike this doctor off the register, and strongly urge the powers that be to review that misguided decision, as the gap between the law in this country and justice grows ever wider.

I look forward to hearing further and would appreciate emailed correspondence, please.

Kind regards,

Charles Stewart-Farthing
